

Rachel Cordingley

I know from my own family what it's like to have someone close to you who has leukaemia. Every year there are thousands of patients all over Britain desperately hoping to find someone who can provide a unique bone marrow match. For most of them, that's the only hope of survival they have. By giving up just an hour of your time to register as a donor with the Anthony Nolan Trust, you could make that vital difference.'

